“ I didn't know Dudley well. As you all know, he liked to be home in the state of Georgia! If you wanted to see him, you went there, which I did for Patti's and Dudley's wedding and several other times over the years. Also, we talked by phone especially the last few years. I didn't know him well, but I liked what I knew. I liked his dry sense of humor, his southern accent, his endearing message on the answering machine, his obvious caring for family and friends (No matter how weak or ill he was, he always asked me about my health.), his always upbeat attitude, and mostly his love for and devotion to my sister. I liked that he left notes here and there for her and I know she will now miss finding those notes. I liked knowing that if Patti had been the one who was ill, Dudley would have taken the same good care of her, as she did him. Dudley will be remembered fondly by many people and I'm honored to be one of them.
