“ Ellen will be missed by all of those that she knew and loved. I'll never forget her beautiful contagious smile that, even if you were having a bad day you would end up smiling too. I remember when Hunter and Snow were so little and with Ellen they would walk across the street to our house to play. (I wonder if they remember it was a dirt road back then.) Hunter loved checking my mailbox to see if there was anything in there. They used to pick a wild flower or two along the way. Then Sylvester was added to the family and Ellen beamed with delight to show him off to us. Before him we both had a boy and a girl. Hunter, Snow and my Andrew all started school the same year, because of their birthdays. When they started the fruit business Ellen and the children would drop off a box of bananas so big we had to share with my family. We had such fun with our children just having a picnic in the yard, yard sales, or chatting at each others homes while watching our children play. Those years went by too fast for the both of us. I love you Ellen and will treasure those days forever.

“ I will miss Ellen. She was so thoughtful, kind and considerate and she loved her Ben with all her heart. She always made me feel so welcome when I stopped in - generally unannounced - to say hello. I would plan to stay just for a few minutes but it seems I always ended up staying for much much longer. I know Ellen was often uncomfortable and in pain but she just wanted to hear about what was going on with me rather than talk about herself. I never heard an unkind word from Ellen and she thought the best of everyone.

Ben, know that my thoughts and prayers are with you and the family. As much as Ellen will be missed she is happy beyond comparison now.

“ My heartfelt condolences to your family in this time of sorrow. You may find much comfort in reading John chapter eleven. Jesus wept when his friend died, showing his great compassion and tender feelings. His promise in verses 23 to 26 is especially heartwarming and gives us hope.
