“ John and I worked together for the last 7 years and went to lunch together often, usually at Matthews cafeteria in Tucker. John cared alot about his country and believed that he stood up for right things. A big man, he was very proud and surely didn't like all the nonsense that has been going on these past few years in Washington. John exemplified the frustrations of men who tried as hard as he could to care about those around him, but only had a shallow well to pull from and was simply unable to give back as much as what was asked of him to give. Since I grew up in Florida, John and I shared a few stories of his adventures there when he a young man. He had a few good ones to share for sure. When I think of John, what comes to mind will be the men of old, who stood strong and proud, not wishy-washy and weak-minded the way men are becoming today, because of the insistence of younger women for men to be in touch with their feelings. That is what I will remember John for. God bless you.##imported-begin##Randall Pearsall##imported-end##
