“ Pikulev family please accept my condolences. I was saddened to hear that Mikhail passed. He was a good man every time I saw him a big smile would come out. He had a gentle spirit and kind heart. Nick I've said a prayer for you my old friend. May God send peace to your heart in this difficult time. You will reunite again with your Father Mikhail in the promised eternity - Vlad Kukharchuk

“ My heart is sobbing, for losing a teacher and a friend in my recent piano centered years. You left those piano guys -- Daniel, Stacy, Tony, John, Julian and two Alex without saying goodbye, but we are comforted that "you are with Jesus now", as Daniel reminded me this morning!

I learned that you were one of the first generation classical guitar professionals in former Soviet Union, after its Perestroika in mid of 1980's, before that guitar had been classified as an instrument of Capitalism by Stalin dictatorship. I can imagine how passionate you were devoted in the instrument when it was forbidden to play by the unlimited state power, which reminds me the isolated years when classical music was absent from public life in China in my most of my school years.

Thank you for educating me so much about piano and your most recent engagement in making violin! I hope that I can have an opportunity to see the violins you made and chat with you again through your beloved instruments.

You are my only Russian friend in my life. It was amazing to me that you love Japanese and Chinese culture so much by collecting those art pieces you proudly showed me. You practiced Taichi and drank Oolong tea, you are a master in many fields. May you rest in peace with Jesus, my dear brother Mikhail!

“ Mikhail was a friend who shared the love of older pianos with me. I remember standing with him in his little shop area and Mikhail trying to save a piano almost passionately working on it like a surgeon would on a patient. He was a good man with a very big heart. I also loved his love of the violin, proudly showing me one he had built. I will miss you Mikhail.

“ Anyone who ever met Mikhail knew he was a good man. Every time we ran into each other he was humble, soft spoken and friendly. I will miss our talks about funny situations and piano service calls. Rest In Peace buddy.
