“ One of my fondest childhood memories is with someone who wasn't my uncle by blood, but by every other measure, was more than family. Uncle Steve played such a big part in my early years — especially for me and my little brothers. He was always there, not because he had to be, but because he wanted to be.

I'll never forget the night he took me to my very first fair. I think I were wide-eyed and overwhelmed by the lights, the sounds, and the sheer magic of it all. But Uncle Steve? He made sure that night was unforgettable. I'm pretty sure he spent every last dime he had just to make sure we got to play every game, ride every ride, and eat every snack we pointed at — and we pointed at everything.

He didn't say no once. He just smiled that easy smile of his and made us feel like the most important kids in the world. That night, he gave us more than just a fun experience — he gave us the gift of joy, laughter, and a memory that has stayed with me to this day.

Uncle Steve may not be with us anymore, but the love he gave us — the way he showed up, again and again — will always live on in our hearts. He was pure magic to us as kids, and that magic will never fade

“ Steve became my brother (in-law) in 1979 when I married his brother. I was 18 and Steve was 14. He instantly won my heart as the funny, lovable little brother. When my first daughter, Amber, came along a few years later, he became her Lovable Uncle Steve. He would play with her and would come pick her up in his car to take her to Nanny and Poppa's house. Even after me and his brother were divorced, he remained a large part of my life, and an even larger part of Amber's life. Later, my second daughter Jess came along, Steve didn't treat her any differently then he treated all his Neice and Nephews. Steve had a heart that grew with each new addition to the family. He was the life birthday parties, Christmas gatherings, and other celebrations. Even though he didn't have children of his own, he had a big heart for kids. He loved his wife, Tanya, and they built a good life together. I am thankful Steve was a child of God, as that assures us of where he is now. Steve, you will forever be a part of our life as your memory will live on. (Carolyn Chapple)
